Other useful information

The Introduction, though cack-handed, should give some idea of the welter of past events which continue to weigh down this book. Whether it helps to sort out the tortuous relationships, I don't know. Much has to be taken on trust, even if it makes little sense, because it's harking back to a scene in a previous book, somewhere.

GUIDE TO L/A/D / ACCENT / DIALECT / VOICE / SPEECH

L/A/D	CHARACTER	VOICE/PERSONALITY
		This is to try and give a bit of background, especially to the characters' relationships to each other.
NICHOLAS	Now in his mid 30s.	There seems to be almost nothing he can't do, but he's trodden on many toes. Much of his driving force has been his longing to prove his legitimacy, and get himself recognised by the St. Pops.
GELIS		Hers has been a love/hate relationship with N, which by the beginning of this book has become a wary truce, and the love side is beginning to grow. She's almost as shrewd as he is, and their conversations are often oblique because of their understanding of each other.
ADORNE		N. has been his rival in trade & they've often been at odds, but he's developed a respect. A patrician with a strong sense of duty & honour.
KATHI o ROBIN	Robin is only about 14 at the start & Kathi 3 years older.	Robin accompanied Nicholas to Iceland & has always hero-worshipped him. Kathi more or less smuggled herself into the expedition, and she & Robin fell in love. She has always been independent minded, and has always had a close (and chaste) rapport with N.
DAVID de SALMETON		Does not get a mention in the Introduction, although he's been a vindictive, destructive force for much of the series. It's suggested, rather lamely, at the end of the book, that this was all because he was in love with Nicholas & wanted to be noticed.
